Individual Fellowships (IF)

Guidance Notes:
How to write a successful proposal with Ca' Foscari University of Venice as host institution

Ca' Foscari welcomes excellent researchers to apply for a Marie Curie Individual Fellowship.

These Guidance notes aim to help candidates taking on this challenge and providing them with all the support needed, in particular focusing on:

- Giving general advice for a successful proposal: tips and tricks to keep in mind while drafting your application;
- Understanding the sections of part B1 and B2 thanks to details and information to set up the proposal;
- Offering information related to Ca' Foscari's descriptions in all the requested aspects – research fields, mentoring/tutoring, infrastructures and facilities expertise.

The Research Office will support you to submit your proposal.

Faida

Feud and blood feud between customary law and legal process in medieval and early modern Europe.

In the past two or three decades the famous essay by Max Gluckman (Gluckmn 1955) has become the reference point for the many historical studies on the feud and revenge. In his study Gluckman emphasized how the system of feud fulfilled an essential function of balance within strongly conflicting societies, both by acting as a true regulatory system of social control and by performing preventing the dreaded and inevitable retaliation represented by episodes of violence.
